BRINGING BACK

The golden age of Hollywood.

The “Golden Age of Hollywood” was a time period in filmmaking where five major motion picture studios produced every aspect of a film’s production on their enormous “lots.” At one point, MGM had 16 films shooting at one time. Everything from casting to filming/post-production to distribution was performed on these lots. Technological advances were common when large crews worked together, seamlessly and collaboratively, all in one location.

SISU Studios, has brought back the ease and efficiency of the golden age in their newly renovated, state-of-the-art, XXX,XXX s.f. facility and 14 acre lot. Offering incredible tax incentives, top-of-the-line gear, large spaces, plenty of parking and easy access.

SISU Studios: The know-how and comprehensiveness of the golden era brought to the cutting edge of the digital age.

The End

Of our presentation...

But just the beginning of a new kind of working relationship.
